Qantas and Jetstar have announced they will move from paper boarding passes to a purely digital system this year in a bid to cut down on paper waste. The change is part of plans to become the first airline in the world to reuse, recycle and compost at least 75 per cent of its waste by the end of 2021. Single-use plastics will be replaced with "alternative packaging", coffee cups will be recycled or composted, old crew uniforms will be recycled and more food will be composted or donated as part of other changes to be implemented this year.
